

Does your organisation provide health and community service programs that are funded by government or primary health networks?

Do some of these problems sound familiar?

- Service managers don't have the skills or time to write high quality tender responses
- Increasing competition means you need to strengthen your reputation with funding bodies and write more persuasive tender responses
- Ad hoc and defensive business development is undermining your organisation's mission and strategy
- You feel like you are stuck on a treadmill chasing more tenders for fewer wins

The Amos Consulting Guide to Better Tender Writing

From 10 years experience working alongside large and small health and community service organisations we have developed our guidebook for better tender writing.

By downloading our guide, you will understand how to:

- Implement a simple, repeatable process for producing persuasive and compelling tender submissions
- Position your organisation for success before the tender is released
- Pursue tenders that you have a high probability of winning, and avoid those you can't win
- Create a team with the right skills to develop better services, impress funding bodies, and win more contracts.
